
The Territorial Status of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas): Past and Present

Rudolf Dolzer

Oceana Publications Inc
New York * London * Rome

Table of Contents

I. Introduction	p. 1
II. The development of territorial status	p. 16
1. The status of the Islands in the period before 1764	p. 16
2. The occupation of the Islands by France in 1764	p. 25
3. The uniform international legal status of the Islands	p. 30
4. The legal position of Britain: 1766 - 1770	p. 35
5. The acquisition of the Islands by Spain in 1766	p. 41
6. The conflict between Spain and Britain in 1770	p. 43
7. The British departure from the Islands in 1774	p. 50
8. Factual developments and the legal status of the Islands after 1774	p. 51
9. The legal significance of the Nootka Sound Convention (1790)	p. 57
10. The status of the Islands between 1811 and 1820	p. 59

11.The status of the Islands from 1820 to 1832	p. 62
a) Continued existence of the Spanish rights?	p. 62
b) Argentine measures in 1820	p. 64
c) Argentine measures in 1823	p. 65
d) Argentine measures from 1826 to 1832	p. 66
e) Legal significance of the Argentine activities	p. 70
12.The events leading to the British actions on the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) in 1832 to 1833: The state of information and the decision-making process	p. 84
13.The taking of power by Britain in 1832 to 1833	p. 100
14.Legal evaluation of the taking of power by Britain	p. 104
a) Procedural obligations: Exhaustion of peaceful means of dispute settlement	p. 110
b) The legality of the use of force by Britain	p. 111
c) The legality of the annexation, 1832 to 1833	p. 122
d) Partial annexation in the legal doctrine of the 19th century	p. 125
e) Partial annexation in 19th century state practice	p. 131

15.The legal status of the Islands after 1833: Preliminary issues	p. 137
16.The Argentine reaction to the assumption of power by Britain	p. 139
17. Subsequent legitimization of the British takeover?	p. 144
III. The application of the right to self-determination and the current status of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)	p. 170

INDEX	p. 191
BIBLIOGRAPHY	P. 197
ANNEXES	p. 211